

Having you in the hereafter

Scenario_part 1 Being weaned with smart dust

Addition to Smart dust should start as soon as people were born in order to collect our data from the first whimper.

Think about the way we are fed by our mums as babies: milk from the breast or from the bottle is our daily income of nourishment. Thanks to nanotechnology, powder milk can be implemented with smart dust in the way medicine is actually developing the nano-enabled drug delivery systems. Since smart dust consists of a network of nanosensors, each couple of parents will choose a particular set of them to provide their child with as they usually choose the name of their baby. So, before leaving the hospital after the childbirth, customized composition of smart dust added powder milk will be given to the parents in order to feed their baby and augment him with the nanosensors.

The way smart milk powder works is as safety as new anti cancer therapy: nano implants could be put in our body by oral injection and then they could be fixed in particular area of it all life long. These kind of nanodevices are generally called nanoshells and nowadays medicine has reached a degree of control never before seen in implantable drug delivery products. The smart dust could be stored inside the nanoshell, which is made from an outer metallic core. Thanks to the different reactions to wavelights of light, from infrared to ultraviolet, we are actually able to drive the smart dust in the area of the body we have chosen for that kind of sensor.

During the routine medical examinations in the first months of baby life, doctors will drive the nanoshells that child ate with the powder milk through light emissions. Nothing more invasive than a common set of vaccines.
